Sewage

Stanislaus County

Modesto city's sewer system has been overwhelmed by the recent storms and rising river water and it is reaching its capacity to store the wastewater. This is due to a hole in the trunk line that is located below the water line in the Tuolumne River.

- As of 2/27/17, the hole in the inlet pipe has a successful barrier around it and when the water level goes down, they will do a complete patch of the hole. This temporary fix is holding and there are no concerns of sewage having to be discharged into the Tuolumne River. WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

- Flooding will continue along the San Diego River in Mission Valley this morning. River levels peaked at around 0300 hours at one of the highest crests on record. Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:

http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/www_bc_cal.php

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

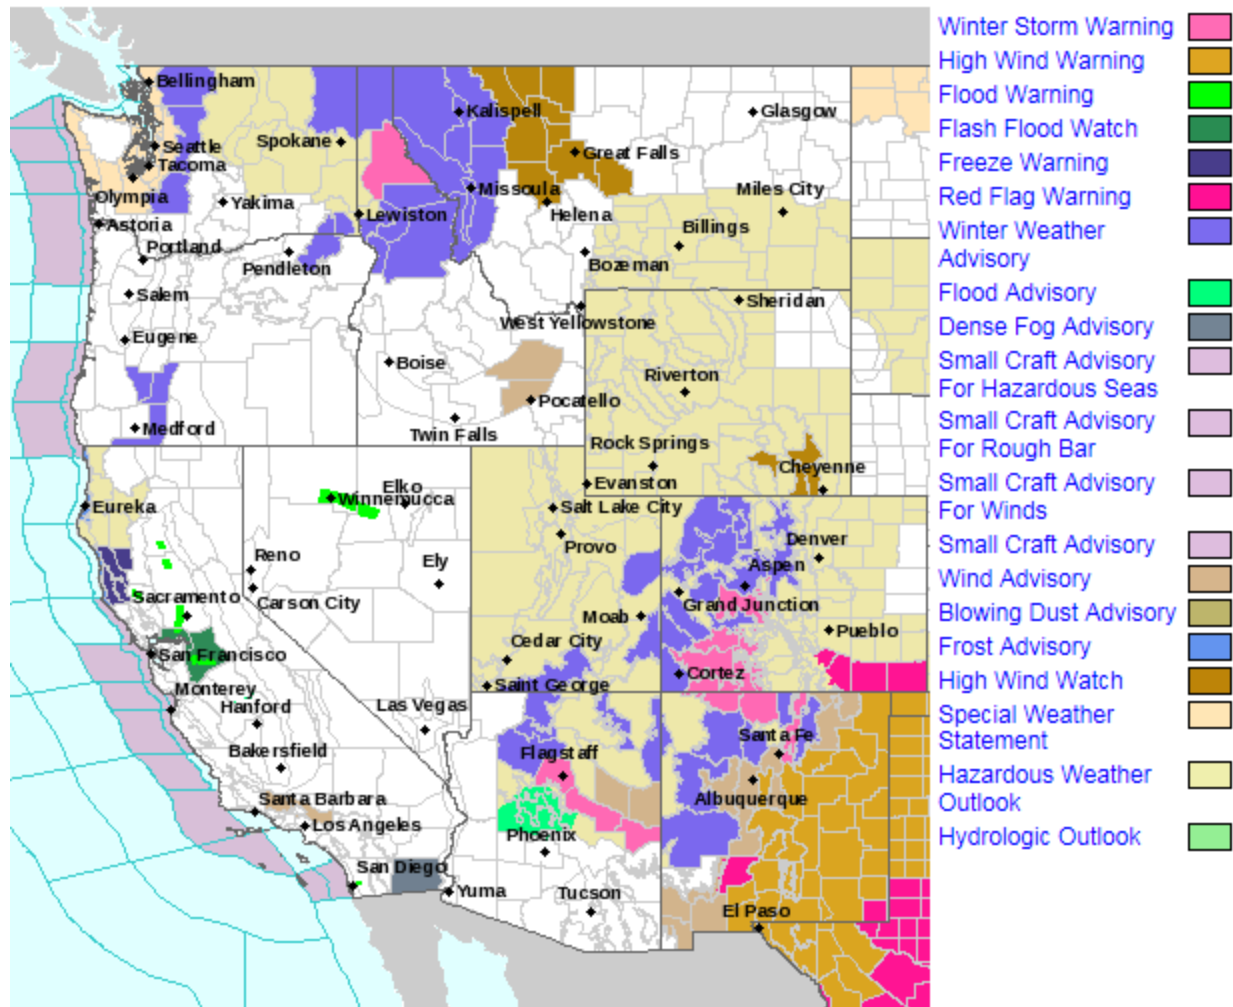

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

A cold trough will be moving through the region until Tuesday. Quite a bit of cloudiness will remain over the region into Tuesday, especially in the north and over the mountains. This cold system will also bring some showers to the northern areas through Tuesday, although fewer are expected Tuesday than today. Wednesday a high pressure ridge will be moving into the region and it will last into Friday with dry weather. Afternoon high temperatures will be pretty seasonable with the warmest areas in the lower and mid 60s. Overnight lows will mostly be unseasonably chilly, however. The weather pattern at the end of the week is quite uncertain, but it appears probable that another wet low pressure trough will arrive Friday with some precipitation for the northwest areas. Rain and mountain snow are expected to develop and spread across more of the region Saturday and Sunday. Snow levels may drop to around 2000 feet in the northwest and 3500 feet in the south Sunday.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A Pacific trough dropping down the West Coast will bring scattered showers to most of the region through tonight. An area of high moisture will move into the region south and east of Los Angeles County this afternoon and evening bringing a period of rain to this part of the area. Most locations south and east of Los Angeles County will receive between 1 and 3 inches of rainfall. Elsewhere, most locations will receive less than a quarter inch of rainfall through tonight. The snow level will be between 4,000 and 5,000 feet. This trough will also bring south to west winds of 20 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph to the wind prone mountain and desert locations through tonight. Temperatures will be 10 to 15 degrees below normal today, with 30s to low 40s across the mountains and upper 40s and 50s in the valleys. Northwest flow on the back side of the trough will continue to bring cool temperatures to the region Tuesday, but temperatures will warm around 5 degrees due to abundant sunshine. Significant warming along with low humidity will occur Wednesday through Friday as a ridge of high pressure builds into California from the Pacific Ocean. Temperatures will be around 10 degrees above normal and humidity will be mainly in the single digits and teens away from the San Joaquin Valley and immediate coast Thursday and Friday. Light offshore flow will take place Wednesday through Friday. A trough will move inland into the Pacific Northwest bringing cooling, higher humidity, and onshore flow to the area this weekend. At this time, no rainfall is expected with this trough.
